Driven by a desire to create a more interconnected art community, Singaporean artist Zhang Fuming, known for his black-and-white woodcuts, has organised this year-end exhibition of 103 artists. Many of them are showing their works in public for the first time.

Zhang, 34, started an art supply store, Drawing Etc. Art Supplies, at Sunshine Plaza on June 22, an enterprise which gave him a chance to meet artists working in all major mediums, from acrylic to gouache to digital print.

He put out a month-long open call, receiving 542 submissions. A total of 110 have been chosen for this inaugural exhibition at 62A Arab Street, a space he is renting for three years.

He hopes it can become a creative space for artists to gather, and pledges to make this sale an annual affair. All proceeds from the sales go to the artists.
